Dear Harold:

I've been trying to get a decision out of Zebra, believe me, but it hasn't been easy. But I've talked to Roberta Grossman and I'm afraid she's not high on the book. She feels it does say a lot about who didn't do it, but doesn't really pinpoint who did do it -- the assassination, I mean. I'm still trying to get her to say yea or nay but it's going to carry through the holidays. I've interested her in reprinting the Whitewash books in mass market paperback, and that too I hope will be resolved immediately after the New Year.

So I appreciate your patience and will be back to you in a couple of weeks.

Until then, all the best.

Sincerely,

RICHARD CURTIS
